Lost for Words

How to talk to someone with cancer
The Irish Cancer Society is the national charity for cancer care, dedicated to eliminating cancer as a major health problem and to improving the lives of those living with cancer. This booklet has been produced by Nursing Services of the Irish Cancer Society to meet the need for improved communication, information and support for cancer patients and their families throughout treatment and afterwards. We thank all those patients, families and professionals whose support and advice made this publication possible.

TEXT
Dr Robert Buckman

EDITOR
Antoinette Walker

SERIES EDITOR
Joan Kelly, Nursing Services Manager

---

© Irish Cancer Society 2003, revised 2005, revised 2010
Next revise: 2012

Product or brand names that appear in this booklet are for example only. The Irish Cancer Society does not endorse any specific product or brand.
All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced or transmitted, in any form or by any means, electronic or mechanical, including photocopying, recording or any information storage and retrieval system, without permission in writing from the Irish Cancer Society.

ISBN 0-95323-690-1

---

Contents

4 Introduction

How to talk to someone with cancer

5 You’re not alone

7 Why talk? Why listen?

9 Obstacles to talking

10 How to be a good listener

17 Understanding what your friend is facing

19 How to help – a practical checklist

23 Conclusion

Support resources

25 Irish Cancer Society services

28 Useful organisations

33 Helpful books
Introduction

This booklet has been written to help you support someone close to you with cancer. Many people find it difficult to talk to someone who has cancer, or to know how to give support. This booklet gives advice and tips that might help you to feel more confident about supporting your friend or relative. If reading this book helps you, why not pass it on to family and friends who might find it helpful too.

At the end of the booklet you will find a list of books you may find useful to read. There is also a list of websites and special groups that have been formed to help and support you at this time. The National Cancer Helpline 1800 200 700 can also give information on all aspects of cancer and people who can help. The helpline is available Monday to Thursday 9am–7pm and Friday 9am–5pm.

How to talk to someone with cancer

You’re not alone

I bumped into John in the lobby of the hospital. I was a student and my family and John’s family had been friends for as long as I could remember. Now John’s mother had been admitted to hospital and was found to have cancer of the kidney. John was sitting downstairs in the lobby looking very upset. I asked him whether he was on his way up to see his mother. ‘I’ve been sitting here for half an hour,’ he said. ‘I want to go and see her, but I’m stuck. I don’t know what to say.’

That story explains how most of us feel when someone we love has been told that they have cancer. It is important to know that what you are feeling is normal and that you’re not alone.

We all feel stuck and helpless, maybe lost for words, when a friend of ours receives some bad news. We all feel that we don’t know what to say. To make things even worse we probably think that there are things we should be saying or should be doing which will make things easier for the person with cancer – if only we knew what they were.

There are ways to overcome those feelings so that you can give practical and useful support. To put it simply, if you want to help but don’t know how, then this booklet is for you.

There are no magic formulas, phrases or approaches which are ‘the right thing’ to say or do during this difficult time. There isn’t a ‘right’ set of words or attitudes that will always help, that everybody else knows and you don’t. If you really want to help your friend, then your desire to help is the most important factor.

There is no ‘right’ thing to say. What is most important is your desire to help.
The second point is that most of us – like John in the story – feel that we don’t know what to say. But the important bit is not what we say – it’s that you are there, and how you listen. In some respects, the single most important thing that you can do for your friend or relative with cancer is to listen. Once you’ve learned the few simple rules of good listening, then you’ll already be of great help and support – and everything will improve from there. The secret is to start – and starting means learning how to be a good listener, and that begins with understanding why listening and talking are so valuable.

The word ‘cancer’

Before we move on to the specific details of listening and supporting, we should recognise the particular problems created by the word ‘cancer’. For most people, when they are told they have cancer, the diagnosis seems to bring a unique sense of dread and foreboding. The patient’s relatives and friends, and the doctors and nurses looking after the patient as well often share feelings like these. Many people with cancer can be cured, and that number is increasing all the time. Nevertheless, the word ‘cancer’ has a more devastating effect than most other diagnoses. That is why a booklet like this is needed more often when the diagnosis is cancer than when it is any other illness.

Why talk? Why listen?

So you want to help, but you’re not sure what to do for the best. Perhaps the most logical place to start is to look at what you’re trying to achieve. There are basically three excellent reasons for talking and listening and they are:

1 Talking to each other is the best way to communicate

There are, of course, many different ways of communicating – kissing, touching, laughing, frowning, even ‘not talking’. However, talking is the most efficient and the most specific way that you have of communicating. It is by far the best way of making any communication clear between you and another person. Other methods of communication are very important, but for them to be of use you usually have to talk first.

2 Simply talking about distress helps relieve it

There are many things that a conversation can achieve and there are many reasons for us to talk. There are obvious ones – such as telling the children not to touch the hot stove, telling a joke, asking about the football results and so on. But there are also less obvious reasons for talking, and one of these is the simple human desire to be listened to. Often, particularly when things go wrong, people talk in order to get what is bothering them off their chest, and to be heard. This serves a useful function. It releases a bit of stress, and human beings can only stand so much stress. You can provide relief for a sick person by listening and by simply allowing them to talk. That in turn means that you can help your friend even if you don’t have all the answers.

In fact, ‘good listening’ is known to be helpful in itself. A research study took place in the United States in which a number of people...
Lost for words: How to talk to someone with cancer

One of the reasons that people bottle up their feelings is shame. Many people are ashamed of some of their feelings – particularly of their fears and anxieties. They are afraid of something but feel that they aren’t ‘supposed’ to be, and so they become ashamed of themselves. One of the greatest services you can do for your friend or relative is to listen to their fears and stay close when you’ve heard them. By not backing away, you show that you accept and understand them. This will, in itself, help to reduce the fear and the shame, and help the person get their sense of perspective back.

So for all these reasons, you have everything to gain and nothing to lose by trying to talk to, and listen to, someone who has just been told that they have cancer. Starting a conversation in these circumstances often feels very awkward and embarrassing, but there are ways to overcome obstacles to conversation.

Obstacles to talking

There are six major kinds of obstacles to free communication between you and the person who is ill. They are:

1. The person who is ill wants to talk but you don’t.
2. The person who is ill doesn’t want to talk but you do.
3. The person who is ill wants to talk, but feels they ought not to.
4. You don’t know how to encourage the person with cancer to talk.
5. The person who is ill appears not to want to talk, but really needs to.
6. You do not know what is best and don’t want to say anything that may make things worse.

These seem like major barriers, but don’t let that alarm you. There are ways of making yourself available for listening and talking without overwhelming your friend or relative. You can work out whether they need or want to talk or not by asking one or two simple questions.

People who have nobody to talk to are more likely to be anxious and depressed. People who have nobody to talk to are more likely to be anxious and depressed. Research has also shown that when people are seriously ill one of their biggest problems is that other people won’t talk to them. Feelings of isolation add a great deal to their burden. Often, if a major anxiety is occupying someone’s mind, the person finds it difficult to talk about anything else at all.
Talking about bad news

You might say nothing at all because you don’t know what to say. As a result, you might withhold information from a family member or indeed your relative or friend with cancer. Try to be as open and honest as you can, even when dealing with a difficult subject.

Some families think it is better not to discuss a diagnosis or a poor prognosis. But this can lead to confusion and distress. Remember it is normal if your relative or friend gets upset if told bad news. Discussing bad news does not cause more distress. The news itself will make them upset, not you talking about it. In fact, not talking about a problem can make it seem bigger.

How to be a good listener

Basically, good listening can be divided into two parts – the physical part and the mental part. A lot of the most awkward gaps in communication are caused by not knowing a few simple rules that encourage free conversation.

1 Get the setting right

This is important, and it’s worth getting the details correct at the start. Get comfortable, sit down, try and look relaxed even if you don’t feel it. Try to signal the fact that you are there to spend some time (for instance, take your coat off!).

Keep your eyes on the same level as the person you’re talking to, which almost always means sitting down. As a general rule, if your friend is in hospital and chairs are unavailable or too low, sitting on the bed is better than standing.

Try and keep the atmosphere as private as possible. Don’t try to talk in a corridor, or on a staircase. That may seem obvious, but often conversations go wrong because of these simple things.

2 Find out if the person who is ill wants to talk

It may be that they are simply not in the mood to talk to you that day. It’s also quite possible that they may want to talk about quite ordinary ‘little’ things such as television programmes or sports events or other everyday subjects. Try not to be offended if that’s the case.

Even if you are mentally prepared for a major conversation with your friend, try not to be put off if they do not want that at this particular moment. You may still do them a valuable service by simply listening and being there while they talk about everyday matters – or perhaps don’t talk at all. If you’re not sure what they want you can always ask ‘Do you feel like talking?’.

This is always better than launching into a deep conversation (such as ‘Tell me about your feelings’) if they are tired or have just been talking to someone else.

3 Listen and show you’re listening

When your friend or relative is talking, try to do two things. Firstly, listen to them instead of thinking of what you’re going to say next, and secondly, show that you’re listening. To listen properly, you must be thinking about what your friend is saying. You should not be rehearsing your reply. Doing so means that you’re anticipating what you think they are about to say, and not listening to what they are saying.

You must try not to interrupt. While they are talking, don’t talk yourself but wait for them to stop speaking before you start. If they interrupt you while you’re saying something with a ‘but’ or ‘I thought’ or something similar, you should stop and let them continue.

4 Encourage the person with cancer to talk
Good listening doesn’t mean just sitting there like a running tape-recorder. You can actually help the person who is ill talk about what’s on their mind by encouraging them. Simple things work very well. Try nodding, or saying things like ‘Yes’, ‘I see’ or ‘What happened next?’ These all sound simple, but at times of great stress it’s the simple things that help things along.

You can also show that you’re hearing, and listening, by repeating two or three words from the person’s last sentence. This really does help the talker to feel that their words are being taken on board. You can also repeat back to the talker what you’ve heard. This is partly to check that you’ve got it right, and partly to show that you’re listening and trying to understand. You can say things like ‘So you mean that’ or ‘If I’ve got that straight, you feel...’

5 Don’t forget silence and non-verbal communication
If someone stops talking, it usually means that they are thinking about something painful or sensitive. Wait with them for a moment and then ask them what they were thinking about. You can hold their hand or touch them if you feel like it. Don’t rush it, even if the silence does seem to last for a long time.

Another point about silences is that sometimes you may think ‘I don’t know what to say’. This may be because there isn’t anything to say. If that’s the case, don’t be afraid to say nothing and just stay close. At times like this, just being there, a touch, or an arm round a shoulder can be of greater value than anything you say.

You can help the person who is ill talk about what’s on their mind by encouraging them.

Don’t be afraid to say nothing and just stay close.

Sometimes, non-verbal communication, such as the way a person holds their body or how they move, tells you much more about the other person than you expect. Here’s one example from a doctor’s experience:

Recently, I was looking after a middle-aged woman called Mary who seemed at first to be very angry and didn’t want to talk. I tried encouraging her to talk but without much success. During one interview, while I was talking, I put my hand out to hers – rather tentatively because I wasn’t sure it was the right thing. To my surprise, she seized it, held it tightly and wouldn’t let go. The atmosphere changed suddenly and she instantly started talking about her fears of further surgery and of being abandoned by her family. The message with non-verbal contact is ‘try it and see’. If, for example, Mary had not responded so positively, I would have been able to take my hand away and neither of us would have suffered any setback as a result of it.

6 Don’t be afraid of describing your own feelings
You’re allowed to say things like ‘I find this difficult to talk about’ or ‘I’m not very good at talking about...’ or even ‘I don’t know what to say’.

An acknowledgement of the feelings that are usually quite obvious to both of you (even if those feelings are yours rather than your friend’s) can dramatically improve the atmosphere. It usually reduces the feelings of awkwardness or embarrassment that we all feel from time to time. It’s remarkable how much this can improve communication.
7 Make sure you haven’t misunderstood

If you are sure you understand what your friend means, you can say so. Responses such as ‘You sound very low’ or ‘I imagine that must have made you very angry’ are replies that tell them that you’ve picked up the emotions they have been talking about or showing. But if you’re not sure what they mean, then ask: ‘What did that feel like?’ ‘What do you think of it?’ ‘How do you feel now?’ Misunderstandings can arise if you make assumptions and are wrong. Something like: ‘Help me understand what you mean a bit more’ is quite useful.

8 Don’t change the subject

If your friend wants to talk about how rotten they feel, let them. It may be distressing for you to hear some of the things they are saying, but if you can manage it then stay with them while they talk. If you find it too uncomfortable, and think you just can’t handle the conversation at that moment, then you should say so. Offer to try to discuss it again later. You can even say very simple and obvious things like ‘This is making me feel very uncomfortable at the moment – can we come back to it later? Do not change the subject without acknowledging the fact that your friend has raised it.

9 Don’t give advice early

Ideally, you should not give advice unless it’s asked for. However, this isn’t an ideal world and quite often you might find yourself giving advice when you haven’t quite been asked. Try not to give advice early in the conversation, because it stops dialogue. If you’re bursting to give advice it’s often easier to use phrases like: ‘Have you thought about trying...’ or: ‘A friend of mine once tried...’. Those are both less bold than: ‘If I were you I’d...’ which makes your friend think (or even say) ‘but you’re not me’, which really is a conversation-stopper.

10 Respond to humour

Many people imagine that there cannot possibly be anything to laugh about if you are seriously ill or dying. However, they are missing an extremely important point about humour. Humour serves an important function in our way of coping with major threats and fears. It allows us to get rid of intense feelings and to get things in perspective. Humour is one of the ways human beings deal with things that seem too impossible to deal with.

If you think for a moment about the commonest subjects of jokes: they include mothers-in-law, fear of flying, hospitals and doctors, sex and so on. None of those subjects is funny in themselves. An argument with a mother-in-law, for instance, can be very distressing but arguing with the mother-in-law has been an easy laugh for the stand-up comedian for centuries. We all laugh most easily at the things we cope with least easily. We laugh at things to get them in perspective, to reduce them in size and threat.

We all laugh most easily at the things we cope with least easily.

One woman in her early forties needed to have a tube (catheter) in her bladder as part of her treatment. While she was in hospital she carried the drainage bag like a handbag and used to say loudly that it was a shame nobody made a drainage bag that matched her gloves. Out of context that may sound ghoulish, but for this particular woman it was a method of dealing with a very distressing problem. It showed her bravery and desire to rise above her physical problems. For her it was very much in character.

Laughter can help people to get a different handle on their situation. If your friend wants to use humour – even humour that to an outsider might seem grim – you should certainly go along with it. It’s helping them to cope. This does not mean that you should try and cheer them up with a supply of jokes. You can best help your friend by responding sensitively to their humour, rather than trying to set the mood with your own.

Cancer Helpline 1800 200 700
To sum up

- The aim of sensitive listening is to understand as completely as you can what the other person is feeling.
- You can never achieve complete understanding but the closer you get, the better the communication between you and your friend will be.
- Your friend may find it difficult if you say ‘I understand how you feel’, because the truth is that you cannot completely understand. However, the more you try to understand your friend’s feelings, the more support you are giving.

Understanding what your friend is facing

It may help you to try and understand something of what your friend is facing, and to see the fears that he or she may have. There are different aspects to any illness that can cause fear, and when the diagnosis is cancer, those fears may be more numerous and may loom larger. To help you encourage your friend to talk about her or his feelings, here are some of the commonest concerns:

The threat to health

When we are in good health, the threat of serious illness seems far away, and very few of us think about it before it happens. When it happens to us we are shocked and confused, and often angry or even bitter.

Uncertainty

A state of uncertainty may be even harder to bear than either good news or bad news. Similarly ‘not knowing where you are and not knowing what to prepare for’ is a very painful state in itself. You can help your friend a lot by simply acknowledging the unpleasantness of uncertainty.

Not knowing what is going to happen next

Tests and treatment for cancer can often involve many different professionals, each with their own expertise. Very often the person with the cancer may feel unskilled and foolish. You can help by reinforcing the fact that nobody is ‘supposed’ to know all the details in advance.

Physical symptoms

This booklet focuses particularly on psychological problems, but of course physical symptoms are very important too. Your friend may, at various stages in the treatment, have a variety of symptoms (including pain or nausea for example). Don’t hesitate to allow them to talk about these symptoms.
Lost for words: How to talk to someone with cancer

Visible signs of treatment or disease
The same is true of outward signs of cancer or its treatment, for example, hair loss due to chemotherapy or radiotherapy (to the head). You can help your friend feel less self-conscious, perhaps by helping them to choose a wig or scarf.

Social isolation
Most serious diseases, and particularly cancer, seem to put up an invisible barrier between the person who is ill and the rest of society. Visiting them and encouraging mutual friends to do the same is a good way of helping reduce that barrier.

The threat of death
Many people are cured of cancer, but the threat of dying is always there. It may continue to haunt people who are cured. You can’t get rid of that fear, but you can allow your friend to talk about it. By listening, you can reduce the impact and the pain of that threat. As always, you don’t have to have all the answers. Listening to the questions will help a lot.

You don’t have to have all the answers. Listening to the questions will help a lot.

Naturally this is only a partial list, but it will at least give you a glimpse of what may be going through your friend’s mind. All of these fears and concerns are normal and natural – what is ‘wrong’ or ‘unnatural’ is not having anybody to talk to about them. That’s why you can be so important to your friend.

How to help – a practical checklist
One of the most common problems in trying to help a person with cancer is that friends and relatives simply don’t know where to start. They want to help, but don’t know what to do first. In this section we’ll see a logical plan that you can follow. It will help you to decide where your help is most useful and where you can start.

Make your offer
You must first find out whether or not your help is wanted. If it is, make your offer. Your initial offer should be specific (not just ‘let me know what I can do’). You should say clearly that you would check back to see if there are things you can help with. Obviously, if you are the parent of a sick child or the spouse or partner of someone with cancer you don’t need to ask. However, in most circumstances, it is important to know whether you’re in the right position to help.

Sometimes a distant acquaintance or colleague is more welcome than a close relative; so don’t prejudge your usefulness. Do not be upset if your friend does not seem to want your support. Do not take it personally. If you are still keen to help, see if there are other family members who need assistance. After you have made the initial offer, do not wait to be called, but check back with some suggestions. You might be able to help indirectly by doing extra school runs or shopping for elderly relatives.

Become informed
If you are to be useful to your friend, you will need some information about what the medical situation is, but only enough to make sensible plans. You do not need to – and should not – become a world expert on the subject. Just find out enough about the illness that will enable you to better understand your friend’s situation. Some people make suggestions to the person with cancer about things they should do or treatments that they should try. This well-meaning advice can often put pressure on the person with the cancer and cause them stress. It is best to offer advice only if the person asks for it.
Assess the needs
This means assessing the needs of the person who is ill and of the rest of the family. Naturally, any assessment is going to be full of uncertainties because the future is often unpredictable, but you should try and think about the needs of the person who is ill. These will, of course, vary with the effect of the cancer at that time.

If the person has serious physical problems, then here are some questions you might ask yourself:

- Who is going to look after them during the day?
- Can they get from the bed to the toilet?
- Can they prepare their own meals?
- Do they need medicines that they cannot take without help?
- Are there children who need to be taken to and from school?
- Is the partner medically fit or are there things they need?
- Is the home suitable for nursing someone with the person’s medical condition or are there things that need to be done there?
- Will there be flowers at home when the person gets out of hospital?

It is important to think of other family members.

Any list will be long and almost certainly incomplete, but it is a start. Check your list by going through a day in the life of your friend and thinking what they will need at each stage.

Decide what you can do and want to do
- What are you good at?
- Can you cook for your friend? Taking round pre-cooked frozen meals may be welcomed. Can you prepare meals for other family members?
- Are you handy around the house? Could you put up handrails or wheelchair ramps if needed?

Start with small practical things
Look at the list of the things you are prepared to do, and perhaps start off by offering a few of them. Offering all of them may overwhelm your friend. Pick some small tasks that are practical that your friend might not be able to do for him/herself easily. Making a small contract and meeting your target is far better than aiming too high and failing. It may need a little thought and some inside knowledge.

For instance, one person, David, used to get his hair cut every week. It wasn’t a big thing, but it was part of his regular routine. When he was in hospital, his friend Peter arranged for the hospital barber to call weekly. It was a nice and thoughtful touch. There are lots of things like that, mowing the lawn when the person is unable to, preparing meals, house-sitting and so on.

Avoid excesses
Don’t give huge gifts that overwhelm and embarrass. Most large gifts spring from a sense of guilt on the part of the donor, and create guilt in the recipient. Similarly, your offers of help need to be modest and suited to the patient and family.
Listen

Time is a present you can always give. You can refer to page 7 for some guidelines on sensitive listening. Try to spend regular time with your friend. It's better to try and spend 10 or 15 minutes once a day or every 2 days, if you can, rather than 2 hours once a month. Be reliable and be there for your friend.

Being with your friend at the clinic

People with cancer are often encouraged to take someone with them when they see the doctor for the first time or for follow-up visits. If your friend wants you to be there, you could offer to help them prepare for the appointment. Your friend may feel anxious when seeing the doctor, and this makes it difficult to think of the right questions to ask. The following suggestions may be useful:

- Ask them to think about the questions that they want answered.
- Help them to organise and write out their questions.
- Suggest that they put their two or three most important questions at the top of the list, as time may be limited.

During the appointment don’t try and speak on behalf of your friend, unless she or he asks you to. Remember it’s their questions that are important. Listen very carefully to the information and answers the doctor gives. It can also be helpful to take notes.

Your friend may find it difficult to take in all the information they are given, especially if they received bad news. Afterwards you can help by reminding them of the information and the answers the doctor gave, as you are likely to remember things they have forgotten. Again, listening and being there to support your friend may be the most important help you can give. You may find that you feel upset by the news given. Don’t try and hide your feelings but remember you are the person who is giving support. Later you may find it helpful to talk to someone close to you, or one of the helpful organisations at the back of this booklet, for support for yourself.

Listening and being there to support your friend may be the most important help you can give.

Involve other people

Be fair to yourself and recognise your own limitations. Every helper and supporter wants to do his or her best. You may be very tempted to undertake heroic tasks, out of a sense of anger and rage against your friend’s situation and the injustice of it. But if you make heroic gestures and then fail you will become part of the problem instead of helping with the solution. You owe it to yourself and to your friend to undertake reasonable tasks so that you succeed. This means you should always be realistic about what you can do. You can always get other people to help with the things you cannot do.

Going through this list in your mind is valuable because it offers a genuinely practical approach to something that is probably unfamiliar to you, and because it quells your own sense of pain at not knowing where to start. Whatever plans you make will certainly change with time as conditions change. Be prepared to be flexible and learn as you go along.

Conclusion

Of course it’s very frightening when someone close to you is told that they have cancer. But you can help in the ways we’ve talked about. Do remember that facts reduce fears. You can help your friend get the facts in perspective. By listening to what your friend is most concerned about and by helping them find the right information and understand it, you can be a vital part of your friend’s support system. And that is one of the most important things that one human being can do for another.
Support resources

Irish Cancer Society Services

The Irish Cancer Society funds a range of cancer support services that provide care and support for people with cancer at home and in hospital.

- Cancer Information Service (CIS)
- Breast Cancer Information Service
- Prostate Cancer Information Service
- Counselling
- Night nursing
- Oncology liaison nurses
- Homecare nurses
- Cancer support groups
- Cancer information booklets
- Financial aid

Cancer Information Service (CIS)

The Society provides a Cancer Information Service with a wide range of services: the National Cancer Helpline is a freefone service that gives confidential information, support and guidance to people concerned about cancer. It is staffed by specialist cancer nurses who have access to the most up-to-date facts on cancer-related issues. These include prevention of cancer, risk factors, screening, dealing with a cancer diagnosis, different treatments, counselling and other support services. The helpline can also put you in contact with the various support groups that are available. The helpline 1800 200 700 operates Monday to Thursday from 9am to 7pm, and every Friday from 9am to 5pm.

- All queries or concerns about cancer can be emailed to the CIS at helpline@irishcancer.ie.
- The walk-in caller service allows anyone with concerns about cancer to freely visit the Society to discuss them in private.
- Message Board is a bulletin board on our website (www.irishcancer.ie) that gives you the chance to post your comments.
- The CancerChat service is a live chatroom with a link to a Cancer Information Service nurse.
Lost for words: How to talk to someone with cancer

Breast Cancer Information Service
The Breast Cancer Information Service (formerly Action Breast Cancer) provides breast cancer information and support. It also funds breast cancer research. Its services are free and confidential. They include a national helpline, publications, one-to-one support, breast awareness talks and advocacy. The Breast Cancer Information Service helpline 1800 30 90 40 runs Monday to Thursday from 9am to 7pm, and every Friday from 9am to 5pm.

Prostate Cancer Information Service
The Prostate Cancer Information Service provides prostate cancer information and support. Its freephone helpline 1800 380 380 runs Monday to Thursday from 9am to 7pm, and every Friday from 9am to 5pm. All queries or concerns about prostate cancer can be emailed to prostate@irishcancer.ie

Counselling
Coping with a diagnosis of cancer can be very stressful. Patients and their families sometimes find it difficult to come to terms with the illness. Many people feel that they cannot talk to a close friend or relative. Counselling can provide emotional support in a safe and confidential environment. Call the helpline to find out about counselling services provided by the Irish Cancer Society and services available in your area.

Night nursing
The Irish Cancer Society can provide a night nurse, free of charge, for up to 70 hours (mainly at night) to families who are caring for a seriously ill person at home. If you need help, you can find out more about this service from a member of the homecare team, your GP or local public health nurse.

Oncology liaison nurses
The Irish Cancer Society funds oncology liaison nurses who provide information as well as emotional and practical support to the patient and his or her family. Oncology liaison nurses work as part of the hospital team in specialist cancer centres.

Homecare nurses
Homecare nurses are specialist palliative care nurses who offer advice on pain control and other symptoms. These nurses work with GPs and public health nurses to form homecare teams bringing care and support, free of charge, to patients in their own homes. Based in local hospitals, health centres and hospices, they can be contacted through your GP or public health nurse. The Irish Cancer Society contributes financially to this service.

Cancer support groups
The Irish Cancer Society funds a range of support groups set up to support you and your family at time of diagnosis, throughout treatment and afterwards. See page 29 for more details.

Cancer information booklets
These booklets provide information on all aspects of cancer and its treatment. They also offer practical advice on learning how to cope with your illness. The booklets are available free of charge from the Irish Cancer Society.

Financial aid
A diagnosis of cancer can bring with it the added burden of financial worries. In certain circumstances, the Irish Cancer Society can provide limited financial help to patients in need. You may be suitable for schemes such as Travel2Care or Financial Aid. If you would like to request this kind of help, contact your oncology or medical social worker at the hospital where you have been treated. He/she should fill in an application form and return it the Irish Cancer Society. If there is no social worker, another health professional involved in your care may apply on your behalf.

If you would like more information on any of the above services, call the National Cancer Helpline 1800 200 700.
Useful organisations

Irish Cancer Society
43/45 Northumberland Road
Dublin 4
Tel: 01 231 0500
National Cancer Helpline: 1800 200 700
Breast Cancer Information Service: 1800 30 90 40
Prostate Cancer Information Service: 1800 380 380
Email: helpline@irishcancer.ie
Website: www.cancer.ie

Mental Health Ireland
Mensana House
6 Adelaide Street
Dún Laoghaire
Co Dublin
Tel: 01 284 1166
Fax: 01 284 1736
Email: info@mentalhealthireland.ie
Website: www.mentalhealthireland.ie

Reach to Recovery
Irish Cancer Society
43/45 Northumberland Road
Dublin 4
Freefone 1800 200 700
Email: support@irishcancer.ie
Website: www.cancer.ie

ARC Cancer Support Centre
ARC House
65 Eccles Street
Dublin 7
Tel: 01 830 7333
Email: info@arccancersupport.ie
Website: www.arccancersupport.ie

CanTeen Ireland
Young Peoples’ Cancer Support Group
Caragh House
North Brunswick Street
Dublin 7
Tel: 01 872 2012
Email: canteen@oceanfree.net
Website: www.canteen.net

Money Advice and Budgeting Service (MABS)
Commercial House
Westend Commercial Village
Blanchardstown
Dublin 15
Tel: 8129350
Freefone 1890 283 438
Email: ndl@mabs.ie
Website: www.mabs.ie

ARC Cancer Support Centre
ARC House
559 South Circular Road
Dublin 8
Tel: 01 707 8880
Email: info@arccancersupport.ie
Website: www.arccancersupport.ie

CanTeen Ireland
Young Peoples’ Cancer Support Group
Caragh House
North Brunswick Street
Dublin 7
Tel: 01 872 2012
Email: canteen@oceanfree.net
Website: www.canteen.net

Money Advice and Budgeting Service (MABS)
Commercial House
Westend Commercial Village
Blanchardstown
Dublin 15
Tel: 8129350
Freefone 1890 283 438
Email: ndl@mabs.ie
Website: www.mabs.ie

ARC Cancer Support Centre
ARC House
559 South Circular Road
Dublin 8
Tel: 01 707 8880
Email: info@arccancersupport.ie
Website: www.arccancersupport.ie

Beacon Cancer Support Centre
Suite 15
Beacon Court
Sandyford
Dublin 18
Tel: 01 213 3554

Bray Cancer Support & Information Centre
368 Main Street
Bray
Co Wicklow
Tel: 286 6966

---

Lost for words: How to talk to someone with cancer

Reach to Recovery
Irish Cancer Society
43/45 Northumberland Road
Dublin 4
Freefone 1800 200 700
Email: support@irishcancer.ie
Website: www.cancer.ie

ARC Cancer Support Centre
ARC House
65 Eccles Street
Dublin 7
Tel: 01 830 7333
Email: info@arccancersupport.ie
Website: www.arccancersupport.ie

CanTeen Ireland
Young Peoples’ Cancer Support Group
Caragh House
North Brunswick Street
Dublin 7
Tel: 01 872 2012
Email: canteen@oceanfree.net
Website: www.canteen.net

---

Lost for words: How to talk to someone with cancer
Lost for words: How to talk to someone with cancer

30

The Cuisle Centre
Cancer Support Group
Block Road
Portlaoise
Co Laois
Tel: 057 868 1492
Email: cuislecentre@eircom.net

Dóchas – Offaly Cancer Support
Teach Dóchas
Offaly Street
Tullamore
Co Offaly
Tel: 057 932 8268
Email: dochasoffaly@hotmail.com
Website: www.dochasoffaly.ie

Dundalk Cancer Support Group
Community Office
Dundalk Partnership Court
Park Street
Dundalk
Co Louth
Tel: 042 933 0288
Website: www.dconroy@actioncancer.org

Éist – Carlow Cancer Support Group
Moville
Co Donegal
Tel: 074 938 2874
Website: www.dconroy@actioncancer.org

Éist – East Inishowen Cancer Support Group
Moville
Co Donegal
Tel: 074 938 2874
Website: www.dconroy@actioncancer.org

HOPE
Enniscorthy Cancer Support & Information Centre
22 Upper Weafer Street
Enniscorthy
Co Wexford
Tel: 053 923 8555
Email: mary@hopesupportcentre.ie

Inis Aoibhinn – Cancer Care West
Costello Road
University College Hospital Galway
Tel: 091 545 000
Email: info@cancercarewest.ie
Website: www.cancercarewest.ie

Kerry Cancer Support Group
Kerry Lee
Oakpark Road
Tralee
Co Kerry
Tel: 087 230 8734
Email: kerrycancersupport@live.ie

LARCC Retreat Centre
Ballinalack
Mullingar
Co Westmeath
Tel: 044 937 1971
Callsave 1850 719 719
Email: info@larcc.ie
Website: www.larcc.ie

Listowel Cancer Support Group
Bedford
Listowel
Co Kerry
Tel: 068 21741 / 087 237 0766

Little Way Cancer Support Centre
4 Woods Way
College Road
Clane
Co Kildare
Tel: 045 902 996
Email: littlewayclane@eircom.net
Website: www.littlewaycancersupport.com

Little Way Cancer Support Centre
8 Stanhope Street
Athy
Co Kildare
Tel: 059 864 1701

Living Beyond Cancer
c/o Oncology Department
Letterkenny General Hospital
Letterkenny
Co Donegal
Tel: 074 912 5888 (Bleep 674)

Mayo Cancer Support Association
Rock Rose House
32 St Patrick’s Avenue
Castlebar
Co Mayo
Tel: 094 903 8407

Roscommon Cancer Support Group
Vita House Family Centre
Abbey Street
Roscommon
Tel: 090 662 5898
Email: vitahouse@eircom.net

Sligo Cancer Support Centre
2A Wine Street
Sligo
Tel: 071 9670 399
Email: scsc@eircom.net
Website: www.sligocancersupport.ie

‘Solas’ – Donegal Cancer Support Centre
St Joseph’s Avenue
Donegal Town
Tel: 074 974 0837
Email: solacedonegal@eircom.net

South East Cancer Foundation
7 Sealy Close
Earlscourt
Waterford
Tel: 051 876 629
Fax: 051 876 718
Email: infosecf@eircom.net

Suimhneas Cancer Support
Pastoral Centre
Church Road
Nenagh
Co Tipperary
Tel: 067 37403

Tallaght Cancer Support Group
30 Temple Jarlath Court
High Street
Tuam
Co Galway
Tel: 093 28522
Email: tccg@eircom.net
Website: www.tuamcancercare.ie

West Clare Cancer Support Group
2 Morton’s Lane
Wicklow
Tel: 087 691 4657 / 0404 32696

Useful websites regarding children

Rainbows Ireland
[Counselling for children]
www.rainbowsireland.com

Barnardos
www.barnardos.ie

Kids Konnected
http://kidskonnected.org

Riprap
www.riprap.org.uk
Useful contacts outside
Republic of Ireland

Action Cancer
Action Cancer House
1 Marlborough Park
Belfast BT9 6XS
Tel: 028 9080 3344
Fax: 028 9080 3356
Email: info@actioncancer.org
Website: www.actioncancer.org

American Cancer Society
Website: www.cancer.org

Penny Brohn Cancer Care (UK)
(formerly Bristol Cancer Help Centre)
Chapel Pill Lane
Pill
Bristol BS20 0HH
Tel: 0044 845 273 2310
Email: info@pennybrohn.org
Website: www.pennybrohn.org

British Association for Counselling
& Psychotherapy
35–37 Albert Street
Rugby
Warwickshire CV21 2SG
Tel: +44 870 443 5252
Website: www.bacp.co.uk

Cancerbackup/Macmillan Cancer Support (UK)
89 Albert Embankment
London SE1 7UQ
Tel: 0044 207 840 7840
Website: www.cancerbackup.org.uk

Cancer Network Buddies
www.cancerbuddiesnetwork.org

Healthtalkonline
www.healthtalkonline.org

Macmillan Support & Information Centre
Belfast City Hospital Trust
79–83 Lisburn Road
Belfast BT9 7AB
Tel: 028 9069 9202
Email: cancer.info@bch.n-i.nhs.uk
Website: www.actioncancer.org

National Cancer Institute (US)
Website: www.nci.nih.gov

The Ulster Cancer Foundation
40/42 Eglantine Avenue
Belfast 98T9 6DX
Tel: 048 906 63281
Website: www.ulstercancer.co.uk

Free booklets from the Irish Cancer Society:
- Understanding the Emotional Effects of Cancer
- Who Can Ever Understand? Taking About Your Cancer
- Talking to Children about Cancer: A Guide for Parents
- A Time to Care: Caring for Someone Seriously Ill at Home

Helpful books

Cancer at Your Fingertips (2nd edn)
Val Speechley & Maxine Rosenfeld
Class Publishing, 2001
ISBN 1-85959-036-5

Cancer Positive: The Role of the Mind in Tackling Cancers
Dr James Colthurst
Michael O’Mara Books Ltd, 2003
ISBN 1-85479-860-X

Cancer: What Every Patient Needs to Know
Jeffrey Tobias
Bloomsbury, 2001

Challenging Cancer: Fighting Back, Taking Control, Finding Options
(2nd edn) Maurice Slevin & Nira Kfir
Class Publishing, 2002
ISBN 1-85959-068-3

Taking Control of Cancer
Beverley van der Molen
Class Publishing, 2003
ISBN 1-85959-091-8

The Bristol Approach to Living with Cancer
Helen Cooke
Robinson, 2003
ISBN 1-84119-680-0

The Key Model – A New Strategy for Cancer Recovery
Dr Sean Collins & Rhoda Draper
Ardagh Clinic, 2004

The Secret C: Straight Talking About Cancer
[explaining cancer to children]
Julie A Stokes
Winston’s Wish, 2000

What You Really Need to Know about Cancer
Dr Robert Buckman
Pan, 1997

Why Mum? A Small Child with a Big Problem
Catherine Thornton
Veritas, 2005
ISBN 1-85390-891-6

For more details on helpful and up-to-date books and their availability, call the National Cancer Helpline 1800 200 700.
Acknowledgements
We would like to extend a special word of thanks to the following people for their invaluable contributions to this booklet and/or previous editions:
Aoife McNamara, Cancer Information Nurse
Marie Cox, Oncology Liaison Nurse
Dr Malcolm Garland, Liaison Psychologist
Peter Kennedy, Medical Social Worker
Nicki Martin, Medical Social Worker
Noeleen Sheridan, Oncology Liaison Nurse
Rory Wilkinson, Practice Development Nurse
Susan Rowan, Patient Education Editor

Would you like more information?
We hope this booklet has been of help to you. If you feel you would like more information or someone to talk to, please call our National Cancer Helpline 1800 200 700.

Would you like to be a patient reviewer?
If you have any suggestions as to how this booklet could be improved, we would be delighted to hear from you. The views of patients, relatives, carers and friends are all welcome. Your comments would help us greatly in the preparation of future information booklets for people with cancer and their carers.

If you wish to email your comments, have an idea for a new booklet or would like to review any of our booklets, please contact us at reviewers@irishcancer.ie. If you would prefer to phone or write to us, see contact details below.

Would you like to help us?
The Irish Cancer Society relies entirely on voluntary contributions from the public to fund its programmes of patient care, education and research. If you would like to support our work in any way – perhaps by making a donation or by organising a local fundraising event – please contact us.

Irish Cancer Society, 43/45 Northumberland Road, Dublin 4.
Tel: 01 231 0500 Email: info@irishcancer.ie
The mission of the Irish Cancer Society is to play a vital role in achieving world-class cancer services in Ireland, to ensure fewer people get cancer and those that do have better outcomes. Our goals are focused around prevention, survival and quality of life with three programme areas to achieve them: advocacy, cancer services and research.